REFLECTING ON 2008

What a fantastic year! First, we found out that we are going to be first-time grandparents (a granddaughter)! About that time I had decided to return to private investigations and began developing a business plan and putting together all those big and little things necessary. In June I began visiting former and current clients, and by the end of July everything was in place. My official date of return, after my resignation from the coroner's office, was September 02nd. This year marks 21 years of being in the investigative community.

So, as Thanksgiving has passed and the year comes to a close, my family and I have so much to be thankful for this year. A growing family and a growing business. In the short time that I was away from the legal community, many things have changed and many things have not – firms have changed, secretaries have stayed and others have moved. Many have had children born, also become grandparents, and others had their children graduate college and law school. What I have really enjoyed is running into my friends of many years and catching up with what has happened to all of us in such a short time. I may call or stop by, just to chat – that is one thing that I quickly realized that I missed, just visiting with friends.

As we all celebrate the passing of a year and the bringing in of the new, and the holidays we share with our friends and family, Karen and I want to share with you our deepest and most heartfelt thanks for making this year very special to us.

GRANDDAUGHTER POOL

The excitement is building! In April we were told that our grandbaby was due on my birthday (December 18) – how exciting. In June that was changed to New Years Day. In October we were told that our granddaughter could be early. Could it happen right in the middle – a Christmas granddaughter? That would be exciting, but I'll admit that having a birthday near the holidays is not exciting while growing up.

So, given the usual disparity of when the big day could happen, I thought it would be fun to have a pool. You now have all the information on the dates and circumstances. Let me know your pick – as an individual or office. A bottle of champagne goes to each of the winner(s).

THE CONSTITUTION OUT LOUD

(FAQs will return next month)

Did you know that there is a public Stone Lectern at the Court House Civic Park? A special thanks to Michael Liggett and Michael Manning for this donation. The first real use was by Jerry Roselle from October 07 to Election Day. During that time, at noon every day, 'High noon in America', was a public reading of the important documents of our Founding Fathers. These included The Constitution, The Declaration of Independence, selected Federalist Papers, and speeches by prominent historical figures of the time. Several attorneys did some reading, and a fine job everyone did. Election Day was the 'grand finale' with a large turn out.

A special thanks to Jerry Roselle for putting this together, Michael Liggett and Michael Manning for the Stone Lectern, and all those that joined at the lectern and in the audience.

We are always available for your investigative needs and no-fee case consultations.
